In dissent, Justice Stevens wrote for the same four Justices who responded to Justice Thomas in Holder.²³⁶ Like the parties in Central Bank, Justice Stevens thought that a stable equilibrium had formed on this issue. In hundreds of cases, the SEC and every federal court of appeals to consider the issue had concluded that aiders and abettors are subject to liability under section 10(b), based upon statutory policy and general principles of tort law.²³⁷ Congress was specifically aware of those decisions, and the relevant committees had signalled approval of them.²³⁸ Justice Stevens worked from the precept, long established in the Court's precedents, that a "settled construction of an important federal statute should not be disturbed unless and until Congress so decides."²³⁹

We do not read Central Bank simply as an opinion in which text trumps practice, for Justice Kennedy also relied on substantive reasons for reading aiding and abetting out of section 10(b).²⁴⁰ A broad view of section 10(b) would create legal exposure for banks, attorneys, and accountants assisting in securities offerings.²⁴¹ This would, he surmised from a single law review article, have vast distributive conse-

²³⁶ See id. at 1455. Justices Blackmun, Souter, and Ginsburg joined in Justice Stevens's opinion.

²³⁷ See id. at 1456.

²³⁸ See id. at 1458-59 & n.8 (relying on the 1988 amendments and committee reports to the 1983 amendments to the Securities Act). The 1983 report approvingly noted "judicial application of the concept of aiding and abetting liability to achieve the remedial purposes of the securities laws." H.R. REP. NO. 355, 98th Cong., 1st Sess. 10 (1983), quoted in Central Bank, 114 S. Ct. at 1458 n.8.

²³⁹ Central Bank, 114 S. Ct. at 1458 (quoting Reves v. Ernst & Young, 494 U.S. 56, 74 (1990) (Stevens, J., concurring)). Justice Kennedy conceded that "our cases have not been consistent in rejecting arguments such as these," id. at 1453, and the Court has regularly followed Justice Stevens's precept in securities cases. REVES ET AL. v. ERNST & YOUNG

CERTIORARI TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE EIGHTH CIRCUIT

No. 88-1480. Argued November 27, 1989—Decided February 21, 1990

In order to raise money to support its general business operations, the Farmers Cooperative of Arkansas and Oklahoma (Co-Op) sold uncollateralized and uninsured promissory notes payable on demand by the holder. Offered to both Co-Op members and nonmembers and marketed as an “Investment Program,” the notes paid a variable interest rate higher than that of local financial institutions. After the Co-Op filed for bankruptcy, petitioners, holders of the notes, filed suit in the District Court against the Co-Op’s auditor, respondent’s predecessor, alleging, inter alia, that it had violated the antifraud provisions of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934—which regulates certain specified instruments, including “any note[s]”—and Arkansas’ securities laws by intentionally failing to follow generally accepted accounting principles that would have made the Co-Op’s insolvency apparent to potential note purchasers. Petitioners prevailed at trial, but the Court of Appeals reversed. Applying the test created in SEC v. W. J. Howey Co., 328 U. S. 293, to determine whether an instrument is an “investment contract” to the determination whether the Co-Op’s instruments were “notes,” the court held that the notes were not securities under the 1934 Act or Arkansas law, and that the statutes’ antifraud provisions therefore did not apply.

HARVARD LAW REVIEW

[Vol. 108:26

nedy made a fine text-based case, but for a statement of law that no party in the case had asked the Court to adopt in the certiorari papers.²³⁵

In dissent, Justice Stevens wrote for the same four Justices who responded to Justice Thomas in Holder.²³⁶ Like the parties in Central Bank, Justice Stevens thought that a stable equilibrium had formed on this issue. In hundreds of cases, the SEC and every federal court of appeals to consider the issue had concluded that aiders and abettors are subject to liability under section 10(b), based upon statutory policy and general principles of tort law.²³⁷ Congress was specifically aware of those decisions, and the relevant committees had signalled approval of them.²³⁸ Justice Stevens worked from the precept, long established in the Court's precedents, that a "settled construction of an important federal statute should not be disturbed unless and until Congress so decides."²³⁹

We do not read Central Bank simply as an opinion in which text trumps practice, for Justice Kennedy also relied on substantive reasons

INTRODUCTION

The cases decided by the Commonwealth, Superior, and Supreme Courts of Pennsylvania between June 1, 1973 and May 31, 1974 in the field of human rights fall into three areas. The first area deals with balancing a welfare recipient's right to privacy against the public's right to know how tax dollars are being expended. The second area deals with the powers of the Pennsylvania Human Relations Commission, and the third involves cases demonstrating the broad effect of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Pennsylvania Constitution.¹

I. McMULLAN v. WOHLGEMUTH: THE WELFARE RECIPIENT'S RIGHT TO PRIVACY

In McMullan v. Wohlgemuth,² the Pennsylvania Supreme Court denied the Philadelphia Inquirer, acting through its Executive Editor, John McMullan, access to the welfare rolls for the city of Philadelphia. The case arose after Helene Wohlgemuth, Secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare, denied a request from Mr. McMullan, acting on behalf of the newspaper, that she produce from among the names in the Philadelphia telephone directory the names and addresses of and amounts received by two percent of those people receiving public assistance in the city of Philadelphia. The Inquirer appealed this denial to Commonwealth Court claiming that it had a right to the requested information under the common law, the "Right-to-Know Act,"³ and the First Amendment to the United States Constitution. The Commonwealth Court granted the Inquirer access to the information it sought⁴ and the Pennsylvania Supreme Court reversed.

Both the majority opinion written by Justice Roberts and the dissenting opinion by Justice Pomeroy agreed that because the First Amendment's "right to speak and publish does not carry with it the

LOOKING FOR A "GOOD DEATH": THE ELDERLY TERMINALLY ILL'S RIGHT TO DIE BY PHYSICIAN-ASSISTED SUICIDE

Katherine A. Chamberlain

An unforeseen consequence of the relatively recent advancement of medicine is that individuals with terminal illnesses are able to extend their lives beyond what was possible only a few years ago. However, this extension sometimes brings with it significant physical pain and decreased quality of life for the patient, raising the question of what rights a mentally competent, terminally ill patient has in terminating her life. Currently, courts permit such individuals to refuse life-

The Court cited a study stating that once patients are treated for pain and depression, they are more likely to want to live.²¹¹ In Glucksberg, terminally ill patients and the doctors treating them sued the state of Washington and argued that a statute outlawing physician-assisted suicide was unconstitutional.²¹² In their decision, the Court distinguished a right to refuse medical care, which does exist, from a right to assistance in committing suicide.²¹³ The Court did not declare assisted suicide a fundamental right; instead, the statute was upheld on the basis of the state's compelling interest in the preservation of life.²¹⁴ In Vacco v. Quill, doctors and patients sued over a similar assisted suicide statute in New York.²¹⁵ The Court distinguished cases where doctors prescribed painkillers to ease pain that inadvertently hastened death from those cases where doctors prescribed painkillers to assist suicide.²¹⁶ However, because the cases both involved end-of-life decisions, it is not immediately evident how their facts inform the management of all levels of pain.
